

The Husky Howler

Western U.S. Burns!

Wildfires are rapidly racing across the West Coast, destroying everything in their path. Wildfires are starting to become a regular thing. It’s not just because of the dryness that the wildfires happen so often and for longer periods of time, it’s because of global warming as well. Who would have thought that pollution from our cars and factories could make wildfires so big and deadly?

Many people think that wildfires just happen in the summer when it’s the hottest and driest. But in California, wildfire season usually starts in May and ends in October. Now with climate change, the season is getting longer and can start as early as January and end as late as December. The reason the fire season goes that late in the year is because when the autumn season starts, the winds come which makes the fire spread faster. In California, the rain isn’t coming as early as it usually does, so the dryness continues, leaving fires raging.

This year, the fires have spread up the coast to Oregon and Washington. This is surprising because those states are very green and wet. Some might think that it’s not “our problem” because the wildfires are far away, but these wildfires are affecting a lot more people than we realize. They’re affecting California, Oregon, Washington, Utah and surrounding states and even British Columbia, Canada because the fires are giving off lots of unhealthy smoke which is traveling and filling the air in the region. These wildfires are a big deal and are destroying homes, hurting people, and causing lots of fear. Thankfully, many brave people and firefighters are helping stop the fires and are saving lives; this gives us hope knowing that we have the best of the best serving our community. -Brookelle Brenchley

Remembering Ms. Gustaveson

Ms. Gustaveson was a beloved art teacher, reading teacher, and newspaper/yearbook advisor during her 20 years at Farmington Junior High. Unfortunately, she recently passed away due to complications from sepsis at the age of 61. In the years before her death, she had undergone many surgeries, all while teaching her students.

Ms. Gustaveson taught 2D art. She taught her students how to paint, how to copy references, and how to make their own art. Some of her projects required creativity, others preciseness. Her assignments included animal zentangles, taking abstract shapes and turning them into something fantastic, making 2D art that looks 3D, and many more.

Ms. Gus was also the advisor for the newspaper/yearbook staff for many years while she was at the school. She oversaw the creation of quality yearbooks and the Husky Howler. -Thomas Bradley

Family Raises $12,000 for Pizza Guy

Roy is an 89-year-old pizza delivery guy for Papa John’s in Weber County. He works 30 hours a week so he can pay for his motor home that he lives in. Whenever he delivers a pizza, he says his personal catch phrase, “Hello, are you looking for some pizza?”. The Valdez family orders from Papa John’s just to see Roy. They post videos on TikTok of him delivering pizza to their house. Their 53,000 followers all felt sad for him that he is still working at his age. So, the Valdez family had an idea. They asked all their followers to donate 50 cents to $1 for Roy. They thought they’d only get a few dollars but instead they got $12,000. The next morning, they delivered a custom T-shirt with his catch phrase on it and $12,000 in cash. As his eyes started to tear up, he said “How do I ever say thank you? I don’t know what to say.” When 8th grader Skye Siddoway heard about this she said, “Jeez Louise! I expected a 20-year-old to be delivering pizzas, not an 89-year-old.” If you were one of the Valdez’s followers, would you donate to Roy the pizza guy? -Molli Bell

12% of People Dream in Black and White

Dreaming is very interesting. It's a natural, mysterious, and exciting experience that happens to all of us. Dreams have been part of human life for as long as we can remember. In 3100 B.C. when most of the Mesopotamian civilization was born, they based their culture on the meaning of their dreams. They thought dreams were messages from the gods. Today most of the facts about dreams are now based on psychology.

Everybody dreams, except in cases of extreme psychological disorder. Often you forget what you dreamed about and it seems like you did not dream. Even blind people dream, but only people who have become blind after birth can see images in their dreams. They don't see visuals, but they have dreams equally vivid involving their other senses such as sound, smell, touch, and emotion.

Not everybody dreams the same way. Some people don't dream in color, 12% of people dream in black and white. Studies show that from 1915 to 1950s the majority of dreams were in black and white. Things started to change toward the 1960s, research has suggested that those changing results may have something to do with the switch of film from black and white to color. Men and women dream differently, men tend to dream more about men than women. On the other side women tend to dream more equally of number of men and women. To add to that men usually have more aggressive emotions in their dreams than women.

Things that are happening around you every day have a part to play in your dreams. Every face that you see in your dreams are faces you have seen before. Since we all see thousands of faces everyday, your dreams have an unlimited amount of faces to use. Our dreams also tend to make our senses part of our dreams; that means that a sound that is happening around you could play apart in what you are dreaming about. For example, if someone was playing the piano while you were sleeping you could dream about a recital. Our dreams also have more negative emotions than positive, the most common emotion to experience while you are dreaming is anxiety.

Scientists use machines that study the brain while you sleep, a very common one is the electroencephalography (EEG). It studies different stages of sleep including REM, N1, N2, N3 and your brain activity (dreams). The REM (Rapid Eye Movement) stage of sleeping usually happens 90 minutes after you fall asleep. The N1 stage of sleeping is considered a transition between wake and sleep. The N2 stage of sleeping is light sleep. The stage N3 of sleeping is deep sleep. Cells within the brain communicate with electrical impulses, and the EEG measures the electrical activity. Studying dreaming allows scientists to observe what areas and networks of the brain are active and communicating during dreaming. -Hailey Bradley

Trick or Treat Traditions

Have you ever wondered why we go to strangers houses to knock on their door and get candy? Trick or Treating has been a tradition for centuries, with a rich and fascinating history. It all started with Christian traditions and some British politics. The Christians had a festival called Samhain. The poor would always go to the place where the rich lived and the rich would get pastries called soul cakes and they would ask them to pray for dead relatives taken by children. This was known as soul-ing. In the US, the pioneers would come to others houses dressed up as ghosts and scary monsters in 1840, and the pioneers helped create the popularity of Halloween. There are so many more traditions about Halloween to discover and learn. We need to remember that this tradition did not just happen, it took many years to create.-Taylor Hunter

Why so salty?

Salt has been part of people's everyday lives since before recorded history. Early humans got their salt from the animals they hunted. When the early humans turned to agriculture, they found that adding salt to vegetables made it seem as if it were meat. Soon salt was found to be useful in other areas, such as preserving food and healing wounds. Around 4,700 years ago it was recorded that there were 40 different types of salts that the ancient Chinese would use. Eventually people began to realize what salt was capable of doing and started using it to preserve other things, such as soybeans, which resulted in the making of soy sauce. During this time Egyptians also began trading salt. The Chinese began to harvest sea salt by putting it in clay pots and boiling the water until the salt crystals formed. The Chinese also began drilling and making salt brine wells. During this time salt was becoming more popular for religious reasons and is still used for religious reasons to this day. Did you know that there have been many wars fought over salt? In the war of 1812 salt was used to pay soldiers because the government was too poor to afford regular pay. The Latin word for salt is Salarium, many words have been adapted from this word such as salary, salami, savage, sauce, salsa, and salvation. Salt is one of the most sought-after commodities in human history. As you can see salt is more complex than you probably knew. It has such a rich and fascinating history! -Indiana Coyle

Dodgers and Rays in World Series

With two balls and two strikes and the Dodgers coming back from a 1-3 disadvantage up to a 3-3 tie against the Braves in the seventh inning, Cody Bellinger is at bat. He hits the sinker going 94 miles per hour to the stands. He walks for the home run to win the game. The Dodgers are now in the world series against the Rays. The Rays almost let the Astros come back from a 3-0 lead. The Astros almost pulled off the comeback but lost in the seventh game 4-2. The Rays and Dodgers both have outstanding records. In the end, the Dodgers won the 2020 World Series four games to two. -Rex Shumway

The Big Five for Disease Prevention

As you may have noticed, there are little to no clubs in action this year. This is because we need you to register for a club and make sure your club will follow the Big Five, a list of actions you need to take to stay safe from Covid-19. The Big Five for disease prevention is: hygiene etiquette, stay home when sick, face coverings, physical distancing, and clean and disinfect. If you follow all these steps it will make sure that we can keep clubs safe but still have fun.

One of the Big Five is physical distancing. This means you can only have a certain number of people in your club at one time, making it difficult for the clubs that a lot of people want to join. So, what are some solutions that we can put in place, to make sure everyone who wants to join can join? One solution is to hold some clubs in the largest rooms in school so that everyone can join and participate will still following guidelines.

Another thing on the Big Five is hygiene etiquette. Hygiene etiquette involves handwashing, hand sanitizing, respiratory etiquette, and no physical contact. Students are required to wash their hands after using the restroom, and signs are posted on the mirror for reminders. To make sure we can have safe clubs is making sure students sanitize their hands before entering and leaving. This will make sure that disease cannot enter or leave the classroom. For respiratory etiquette, this means you need to cover coughs and sneezes with a tissue. Used tissues should be thrown in the trash and you need to go wash your hands with soap and hot water for at least 20 seconds after.

Let’s make this a great school year with great clubs and activities, all while staying safe! Make sure to follow all the hygiene etiquette so we can continue to be in school and have a fabulous time! -Cameron Rudd

Can’t Stop Dancing!

There are many types of dancing: Ballet, Hip Hop, Tap. The Dance Company does all of these and more, all while making friends and staying active. You’ve seen some of the Dance Company’s performances on video or at home sports games. But do you know what goes on behind the scenes?

Charley Allen, a 9th grader on the Dance Company, said, “We work on routines, or we work on the different types of movement, and how we can work on different styles.” Charley also said they compare flexibility and talk to each other about why they dance.

Dance Company also keeps its members healthy. Dancing is a really good workout. Moving around your whole body for a long time can really get your blood flowing and your heart pumping. Overall, Dance Company is a great thing to do if you like to dance and want to make friends doing it! With a team of 41 people, you’re sure to make a friend! -Anna Burke

Trick or Treating, Sleep Deprivation, and No School?

Would not having school the day after Halloween help students and teachers alike? We all know that pumpkins, candy, costumes, and trick or treating are just some of the many things that make Halloween what it is. Yet Halloween also means staying up late, eating too much candy and going into a sugar coma on November 1st. This results in either grumpy tired students or sugar crazy students, practically bouncing off walls.

So the question is, what should be done about it?

Since Tradition is such an important thing in our culture, setting a curfew for Halloween would send many people up in arms. And nobody wants to give out toothpaste or stickers on Halloween to prevent the amount of sugar intake for the children. And what teen wants to miss the midnight party? So, would having students not go to school on November 1st solve the problem? Many students are tired (and grumpy) from the late night and lack of sleep. To expect them to sit still and pay attention for about seven hours is an unrealistic request for many of them. No student can be forced to remember who won the war of 1812 (it was the British, by the way) when they got a significantly less amount of sleep.

According to an article by the American Sleep Association, “sleep affects our daily functioning and our physical and mental health”. So, if the students aren’t getting enough sleep how can they be expected to have normal brain function and retain ANY information? They can’t. Ari Landon said that “I think that school should be cancelled the day after Halloween.” When asked if she gets significantly less sleep she responded “Yes, I usually stay up late and eat candy.” When Kaylie Uzelac was asked her opinion on this she said “It’s a very smart idea [to not have school] and makes sense because I like to stay up until 4 am with my friends to watch scary movies... then I have to wake up the next morning and don’t have energy for school.” Logically, November 1st should be off from school to help prevent the major headache in students and teachers alike. And who wouldn’t want a day off? -Rebecca Tew

Halloween: What's happening?

Many people hope to have a normal Halloween. However, as there is a pandemic going on, that is not set in stone. Due to this event, Halloween and other holidays are a little turbulent. Lots of people have varying opinions about this, ranging from “we should have a normal Halloween without masks to give the children a sense of familiarity” to “We should Trick-or-Treat with masks and gloves” to “We just shouldn’t do it at all.” Well, I agree it is important to give the kids a common ground in this, but I also think we should do our best to limit the spread of the virus.

My proposal on this event is we have both Trick-or-Treaters and the people handing out candy wear masks as well as gloves. My reasons being is we have not had a big holiday yet that we cannot really do without social distancing, and things have been rather unpredictable, which has provided a much more chaotic lifestyle for most of us. I think that providing something that feels familiar to people will make life seem less frightening and uncertain. This may also help others gain a sense of consistency in the 2020 year and give them a sense of ease.

On the other hand, Halloween is a very dangerous holiday, despite the enlarged spread of germs. I mean, it encourages you to take candy from strangers! Though wearing a mask and gloves will help limit the spread of germs, many are wondering if it will be enough. It is the strong opinion of others that Trick-or-Treating should be canceled completely because there is no way that society can trust toddlers to help prevent the spread. Others believe this event should be canceled because if one person has it, they can give it to the Trick-or-Treaters, who will then continue to collect candy infecting many other people.

In conclusion, many unique people have many unique opinions on this situation, and in the end, no single person can control what everyone else does. We should all do our best to limit the spread of the corona virus and stay safe. But in doing this, we can not forget the true meaning of Halloween, pretend to be something you are not, take candy from strangers, and try to scare everyone half to death. -Abby Carter

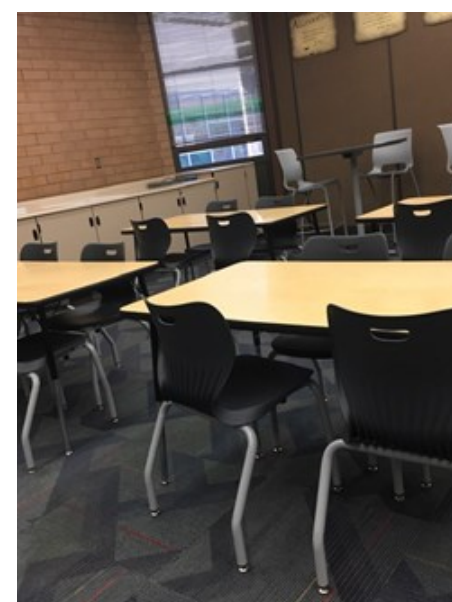

Downsides of the Hybrid Schedule

“The main hope of a nation lies in the proper education of its youth,” said one of Europe’s most famous scholars Desiderius Erasmus. To get proper education, students need to be going to school in person four days a week, instead of two. The Davis Board of Education thought about switching to a more normal schedule of four days a week instead of the hybrid schedule but then decided against it for safety reasons. The hybrid schedule is not impossible, but it does make things more complicated. Students only see their teachers once a week and teachers must teach lessons in class and create online work. Coming to school four days a week instead of the hybrid schedule is better for students and teachers because communication and learning can be done easier.

The main downside of the hybrid schedule is that students and teachers only see each other once a week. In that hour and a half class period, teachers must teach as much as they can while also explaining what must be done for online work in the coming week. Teachers must also teach half the class one day and the other half the next. Along with that, they have to make sure that the kids at home have online work to do. When a question at home comes up, it is often complicated to contact the teacher. Though email and things like that are available, it takes a lot less time to just ask your teacher in person.

Many students got separated from friends because of the way the hybrid schedule is set up. It is important to have friends at school because it can improve your social and emotional health. According to a study done by Harvard, “having solid friendships in our life [promotes] brain health... and allows us to rebound from health issues and disease more quickly.” Having someone to talk to about problems with helps humans stay regulated. And like the quote says, if someone had gotten Covid-19, having a friend there to talk about it with would help them move on from it sooner.

Junior High and High Schools in Davis School District will still be on the hybrid schedule until the end of first term. We will need to be doing everything we can during this time, wearing masks, physical distancing, and sanitizing often, to slow the spread of Covid-19 so we can go back to four days a week. After all, proper education can’t be achieved if everyone is sick. -Abbey Klein

School Plan Changes

The Davis County School Board met again on Wednesday, September 23 to discuss the previous plan to move all students to a 4-day a week schedule. The board had previously determined that Davis County Schools were safe enough to move all students together. They moved to keep the plan to move to the 4-day plan on schedule for all elementary schools while moving secondary schools' transition to after the end of the term on November 2nd.

The Board called the emergency meeting over a rise of COVID-19 cases in schools statewide. Although Davis County cases of the virus had stayed relatively low, they were still on the rise. Most cases came from Jr High schools and High schools, calling for the revision of the plan to move to a 4-day plan. Parents who were pro Hybrid Schedule started a petition that amassed almost 5000 signatures as of September 28, 2020.

The plan had been for Secondary Schools to transition to the 4-day plan on October 5th and to move on from there. After the emergency meeting, the plan has been changed to move to the 4-day schedule on November 2nd, after the end of first term. Elementary Schools moved ahead with their original plan and started the 4-day plan on September 28th. -Thomas Bradley

GO HUSKIES!

The cheerleaders are knocking it out of the park! They have been cheering on the volleyball players and the boys basketball players at all our games. Their coach is Mrs. McCarty, and the cheerleaders love her! The cheerleaders have a lot of fun together in and out of school. The cheerleaders practice every 8th period so that they can sharpen their skills.

Mrs. McCarty is loved by her cheerleaders! "Mrs. McCarty is super sweet!" stated Addie Sanders, one of the cheerleaders. Another cheerleader, Elle Braun says that she even cares about the cheerleader's personal life. She also teaches math and English here at Farmington Jr. She was the assistant coach for two years, then she became the coach and has been for 21 years. She was on the drill team in high school, and just fell in love with cheer.

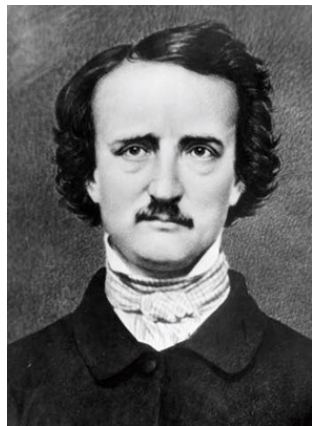

Being a cheerleader takes a lot of time and effort. In addition to practice every 8th period, many of the cheerleaders take extra tumbling and cheer classes to learn more skills. All the cheerleaders go to the home games. At other games, only a few can go. Brooklyn Bement says that cheer is so much fun! "Everyone who is interested should try out!" says Kelsei Dearden. If you are interested, tryouts are held in March for the upcoming year. You can tryout at the end of your 7th grade year up to 9th grade.

-Brooklyn Rudd

Murder in English Class!

The 8th graders are reading scary stories in English class! One of the scary stories they're reading is called The Tell-Tale Heart. According to Wikipedia, it is a short story by an American Writer named Edgar Allen Poe. The story was first published in 1843. The story is told by an unnamed narrator who "endeavors to convince the reader of the narrator's sanity while simultaneously describing a murder the narrator committed."

According to The Poe Museum, Edgar Allen Poe was born to traveling actors in Boston on January 19, 1809, but within three years both of his parents had died. Poe was taken in by the wealthy tobacco merchant John Allen and his wife Frances Valentine Allen in Richmond, Virginia, while his brother and sister went to live with other families. Mr. Allen reared Poe to be a businessman and a Virginia gentleman, but Poe dreamt of being like his childhood hero, the British poet Lord Byron. -Sadie Young
